Comments

“ One of the sweetest memories of Chuck, was when our son Joey was born. As he took Joey in his arms, he looked up at me and said, “Thank you, I have a son now, to carry on the Bradford name.”

“ To many memories, but I loved it when he told me of the day I was born. He and my brother's had to wait in the car at Fort McPhearson Army base while mama was having me, and blow the car horn. The Military police would come and tell him to stop that. Chuck locked the car door and as the guy would walk away he would blow the horn again and make the guy so mad. He thought that was so smart and funny of himself. So many memories of love and joy and laughter with my brother.

“ My favorite memories are all those times we chatted together on the phone and our Leo connection.
We used to always say "It's a Leo thing "
And for many years I would call him on his birthday and say....did you know that today is the day Elvis died ? I can still hear him saying "Why did Elvis have to go and die on my birthday !"
